MASSACRE MURRAY'S WARRIORS

Capt. Slusher's Cohorts Make Complete
Clean-Up in Golf Tourney at Country Club—Second Challenge is Not Accepted

It wasn't an ordinary rout but more like a massacre, although there was no intimation of treachery of any sort of trap, such as the wily Mexicans are supposed to set for their foes. Capt. Murray and his men walked right into it with eyes wide open and Capt. Slusher, with his seasoned vets, simply bagged them by superior skill and strategy.

The agony was drawn out for a week on the golf course of the Chickasha Country club though it early became evident that the Murray cohorts were doomed to slaughter. When the battle was finally wound up late yesterday afternoon, Capt. Murray's ranks had been so terribly decimated that the magnanimous conquerors didn't have the heart to give out an official list of casualties. The final score in the tourney is a secret that will never be known except in the inner circles of goldfom.

Be it said to their credit, Murray and his followers bore their disaster with great fortitude. Col. Ad Melton, at the dinner which the losers of the tourney furnished to the winners at the close, was called upon to voice the sentiments of the victors, and by the exercise of remarkable self-restraint, he forbore the pleasure of "rubbing it in" on the fallen foe. However, he closed his remarks with a challenge to the enemy to play 'em again. Deeming discretion the better part of valor, Capt. Murray, in his reply, announced that he would not accept it now, but as Col. Roosevelt did in the case of the Moose nomination, would take the matter under consideration and reject it later.

Lloyd Doughty, who was the star performer of the losing team, made the speech that carried the crowd in the after-festivities. Capt. Slusher and Alger Melton also made a few feeling remarks, the latter, who was on the losing side, hinting that the result in part was due to the superior ability of Slusherites as score-keepers.

When Alger Melton declared that the defeat of his side was not due to lack of valor or skill but to inferior generalship, suggesting court-martial proceedings for Capt. Murray, the latter promptly announced, "I have resigned." Privately, Harry Ludlow explained that when the selection for the players for the opposing teams was made, Murray manipulated the deal so that he would get first choice of players in each case, thus slipping one over the innocent Slusher. In view of the outcome of the affair, Mr. Ludlow's conclusion was that "Honesty is the best policy."

About one hundred members of the club and their ladies enjoyed the superb dinner that was served under the direction of Tom Boyd, secretary of the club, and dancing till a late hour followed.

No Trick About It.
Alice, aged three, stood watching her mother baking pancakes. After a few moments' silent observation she said: "That's easy; put on back, turn on stomach, then eat."

Short Stories OF THE TOWN

Meeting Postponed.

Chickasha's patriotism meeting will be deferred for a few days awaiting developments in the Mexican situation. Albert Hollingsworth announced this morning, following a conference last night with a number of the leaders in the local movement.

Small Damage from Fire.

Very little damage was done at 4 o'clock this morning when fire of an unknown origin was discovered in a four room house at 109 Minnesota. The building was vacant. The fire originated in the center of the lower floor, which contained two rooms. The property belongs to B. F. Lovejoy.

Voting for High School.

A new piano for the senior high school is the plan of a number of friends who are casting their votes at the Booterie just for "the high school" instead of for any particular person. "The high school does need the piano, all right," one of the instructors said last night as he cast his votes. "It'll be a big help for the young people."

Hundred Tickets Sold.

One hundred tickets have been sold for tonight's meeting of the Men's Dinner club, to be held in Nellie Sparks hall, according to an announcement made this morning by D. H. Roche, president of the club. "Oh, yes, it will be one of the biggest meetings of the year; we'll all have a big time, of course, always do. That's understood," Mr. Roche concluded.

Boxing Bout Tonight.

The B. M. A. C. will stage a boxing bout at their club rooms tonight. Several interesting preliminaries will be presented and the main event will be furnished by "Kid" Slides of El Reno, and Hobson Bule of Chickasha, welterweights, who are scheduled to go ten rounds.

Dr. Penquite Home.

Dr. Walter Penquite has returned from Detroit, Mich., where he attended the annual convention of the American Medical association in session last week. He and Dr. John Riley of Oklahoma City were the two delegates from this state. Dr. Penquite reports the largest and best meeting ever held with over 8,000 physicians in attendance.

The Searchlight.

It is the course of mortal things that the good should be shadowed by the bad, and virtue shine the brightest when contrasted with vice. Whoever proposes to discourage vice and to vindicate religion, morality and social order against their enemies must unveil crime in all its deformity and place it before the eyes of men in its colossal magnitude; he must diligently explore its dark mazes and make himself familiar with sentiments at the wickedness of which his soul revolts.—Schiller.

USE ANCIENT WATER CRAFT

Nations Warring in Mesopotamia
Employ the "Kelek" on the Tigris and Euphrates.

All kinds of ships of war and of commerce have been pressed into service in the great European conflict. There are over-sea boats, on-the-water boats and under-sea boats; there are superdreadnaughts, battle cruisers and disguised commerce raiders; there are great ocean greyhounds that yesterday were floating palaces of the ocean, carrying the wealth and beauty of civilization on their migrations across the sea, but that today are grim havens of suffering, where the wall of pain and the shriek of anguish have substituted the carnival of music and the sound of mirth.

But strangest of all the kinds of floating equipment that the war has drafted into service is the kelek. Describing this strange boat, the National Geographic society says: "The kelek is probably one of the earliest forms of water transportation used by our ancestors in Asia. It consists of goat skins inflated with air, tied beneath a framework of light poles. Often as many as eight hundred such skins are used to give the boat the desired buoyancy."

"The cargo is loaded on to the kelek just as though it were a flat-bottomed barge, after which the craft begins its journey down the Tigris or the Euphrates propelled or guided by cars. When it reaches its journey's end it is broken up and sold as skins and timber."

"The two great rivers of Mesopotamia are very crooked and very irregular in their depths. The air line distance between Diarbekir and Bagdad is 400 miles, while the water route via the Tigris is about 1,000 miles. At many places the river is deep enough to accommodate boats of considerable draft, but at others it is so shallow that a man has difficulty in swimming. But even over shallows, where a man cannot go as a swimmer, a well-laden kelek will float without accident."

"For thousands of years this buoyant boat has helped the people of Mesopotamia to move their commerce over the shoals and shallows of two of the earth's moodiest rivers, and has now come to play its small part in the greatest war of human history."

Boys in Business.

The American Boy says that "boys are the backbone of the wintergreen oil industry," because it is they who pick the wintergreen leaves and take them to the distilleries where the oil is distilled. Over 90 per cent of all the wintergreen oil produced in the world comes from Monroe county, Pennsylvania, in the heart of the Pocono mountains, where the wintergreen plant is plentiful. The plant is only three inches high and it is almost as backbreaking a process as picking strawberries is, to pick 50 pounds per day, which is a day's work for a nimble boy. There are said to be about 500 of these "wintergreen boys" and they work every day from April to November, picking the leaves, making them into bales and carrying them by pushcarts to the "still." These boys could tell us much about rattlesnakes, but they have trained eyes and ears so well that it is a rare thing for one of them to be bitten.

Hippocras—the Liqueur.

That Pepys should have drunk hippocras at the Guildhall in 1663 without knowing that it was an intoxicant is somewhat remarkable. For this aromatic cordial, which originally was supposed to be mingled according to the recipe of Hippocrates, was imported here in Saxony times, and remained a popular liquor for centuries. It bore a close affinity to piment, which in the year 817 was forbidden to the clergy, except on special occasions, by the council of Aix-la-Chapelle. In Elizabeth's time hippocras was usually served at the beginning of a banquet, being "of so comforting a nature that the stomach would be at once put into good temper." Apparently it had an opposite effect on Pepys.—London Chronicle.

Learning Without Tears.

"Learning without tears"—that is to say, without trouble, industry and the application of the mind—is no learning at all. No pains, no gains, says the adage.

Learning to spell phonetically would be a mere mechanical treadmill. But for the exercise of intelligence and for drawing out the feeling of joy in the beautiful there is no such instrument in the world as the acquisition of a real literary language.

Language was God's gift to man in Eden. Is its fragrance and exquisite structure to be now fished from the race by a coterie of busybodies and nobodies?—Exchange.

INFANT IS ABANDONED

Considerable excitement resulted in the neighborhood of Verden yesterday afternoon when some people travelling to town discovered an infant abandoned under a bridge a half mile south of Verden.

It developed that the child belonged to Mrs. Myrtle Stringfield, a woman who had formerly lived at Verden but was now working in Chickasha. The woman was arrested yesterday on the charge of abandoning a child under six years of age. The penalty for such an offense is not less than a year in jail nor more than seven years in the penitentiary.

The child is about a month old. The mother claims to be only 17 years of age. She has been divorced from her husband. She gave as the reason for her act that she could not obtain work. She is in jail awaiting preliminary hearing in Justice Moore's court next Wednesday.
